ANNUAL ELECTIONS HELD FOR Y. W. C. A.

New Association Year Begins This Week

Lively Debate on Proposed Alternate Membership Basis held at Meeting

The weekly meeting of the Y. W. C. A. was held in the old chapel at quarter of five last Thursday. The President of the Association, Ruth Hesselgrave presided.

The first part of the meeting was given over to the debate on the question of the proposed Alternate Membership Basis. Goldie Courtemanche and Alice Chynoweth upheld the affirmative side while Helen Paine and Hazel Grover argued on the negative of the question.

Those supporting the affirmative side spoke of the purpose of the Association and the pledge taken by one joining. They felt that any girl who could take the pledge would feel its sacredness, althnugh not a member of any church. The argument was put forth that the Association would reap untold benefits from these possible members. They upheld the idea that church membership is not an absolute guarantee of Christianity, and that an outsider may be just as much or sometimes even more in touch with the true spirit of the Master. The great possibility of the organization's being a stepping stone to church membership was spoken of. They felt that the true Christian spirit would be a union of the young people, inclusive of denomination. It was said that the world leaders of the Y. W. C. A. must have felt a great need in order to have brought this question up. Another great point in favor of this new membership basis, was mentioned as the fact that the basis is an open question to each college no matter if the national decision be affirmative. This gives each college the chance to use the basis best for its own peculiar conditions.

The negative side was argued strongly by the two opponents. It was said that this new basis would destroy the purpose of Y. W. C. A.; that the new members would not feel the same spirit as those joining under the former basis. It was argued that it would be a great hinderance to large organizations, in which this new element, admitted by the new basis, would gain control.

At the close of the debate an open forum was held and a rising vote was taken which showed 48 to 12 in favor of the new basis. The prevailing belief was that the Y. W. C. A. should not lag behind in making one unit of all

VERMONT BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP FALLS TO MIDDLEBURY PASSERS

Blue and White Outplays Vermont in Deciding Game—Captain Parker Unable To Lead His Men

T. C. A. Defeats Midd Seconds in Fast Preliminary Game 32-29—Leonard Stars—Whole College Out to See Games—Wonderful Spirit Displayed—Singing and Cheering Full of Old Time "Pep"

Playing the same snappy brand of basketball which they have done all the season Middlebury's varsity quintet carried out the cheering section's prediction and buried Vermont under a 34 to 14 score. When the teams lined up Captain "Beany" Parker was missing from Midd's line-up as he was sick and Coach Murch thought it best for him not to play. He sat on the side lines and every time his men dropped the ball in the Vermont basket a broad grin spread across his face.

Midd started off at once to show Vermont that she knew just where her basket was and Heath caged the ball after Miske had brought it down the floor through the entire Green and Gold team. A few minutes later Heath repeated this performance, followed directly by Miske. Blood who was the only Vermont player able to locate the Blue and White basket retaliated with two pretty baskets from the floor and two fouls which were the extent of U. V. M.'s scoring during the first half. When the whistle blew Midd was leading 13 to 6.

The second half opened with the Blue team growing stronger every minute and the University five appeared bewildered at the lightning passes and floor work. Miske gave the Vermont passers no end of worry and time after time eluded the entire team and caged the ball from all angles. The cheering section grew wilder as the game progressed and their cheering seemed to add more fight to the five men on the floor, who kept up a steady attack on their opponents and forced them to shift their line-up several times. 'Keck" Parker who jumped center in "Beany" Parker's place got the ball away from his man and Heath or Miske were right there to put it where it counted. Christian and Myrick played their same steady game at the guard positions and broke up the Green and Gold passers constantly. "Pepper" Ross got into the game in the last few minutes of play and immediately made his presence felt by neatly breaking up a pass and bringing the ball down under the Vermont basket where Miske tossed it in.

In the preliminary to the Big game Midd Seconds and T. C. A. played an exciting contest which ended in a close victory for the team from Poultney by 32 to 29. The result was in doubt until the last minute of play, first one team taking the lead and then the other.

The teams played nip and tuck all the way and when the whistle blew for the end of the first half they were deadlocked 13-13. Midd began the second half as if she was going to leave the prep school five behind but was soon checked by Captain Leonard, the fast forward of the visitors. He rallied his team and soon had the score tied having accounted for twenty of the points himself. With the score tied and a minute left to play Coulter shot a clean basket from the side line which gave his team the decision. The game ended with Leonard shooting a foul bringing his team's total up to 32.

Both teams displayed good team work but the prep school five had a slight edge on Midd's passers. Moran and Franklyn played well for the second team while Leonard was the mainstay of his team and the individual star of the game.

On a par with the wonderful playing of both the varsity and the second team was the spirit shown by the men in the cheering section. They kept up a constant line of cheers and songs and were full of "pep" all through the games. The intermission between the halves was enlivened by the appearance of "Misses" Mercer and Swan, who created many a laugh by their flirtatious actions toward the men of the fairer sex, and by the college mandolin club which played a few selections. It was a Big Night from start to finish and marks the beginning of a new spirit in old Midd.

The line-up:

Middlebury (34)		Vermont (13)

C. Parker	c.	Branon

CLASS BASKETBALL ENDS IN DEADLOCK

Sophs and Seniors Tied for Premier Honors

Both Games Close Season With a Victory—Senior Junior Game a Comedy

The curtain fell on the inter-class basketball tournament in the gymnasium last Wednesday night with victories for both the seniors and sophomores who are tied for the title.

In the first game of the evening the juniors attempted to break their string of defeats and when the first half ended were pressing the senior five 16 to 13. The second half of the game turned out a burlesque and the score at the end of the first half was taken as the final result. From the manner in which the juniors were playing it looked as if they might have sprung a surprise on the fast senior five.

Unable to break up the floor work and passing of the sophomores, the freshmen went down to defeat by the score of 28 to 11. Not once during the entire game did the sophomores have to exert themselves and the first half ended with the freshmen five only having two fouls to their credit while the 1920 team had eleven points. The second half proved even more fruitful to the sophomore five and Heath, Parker and Ross caged the ball seven times between them. Franklin played a good game for his class getting six of his team's eleven points.

These games marked the close of a most successful season although the final standings might lead one to suspect that the freshmen and juniors were far outclassed by the other two classes. Every game was closely contested and in three of the games the winner was in doubt up until the whistle blew.

The final standing of the classes was as follows:

	Won	Lost
1918	5	1
1920	5	1
1921	2	4
1919	0	6

It has been decided to present the cup to the class whose combined standing both women's and men's basketball is the highest.

Seniors and Freshmen Win in Second Bout

The second set of girls' basketball games came off last Friday evening, with the seniors playing the sophomores, and the juniors playing the freshmen. Christine Webster starred for the senior team and they easily carried off the victory with a score of 20-8.

Fraternity Scholarship

A brief statement is published elsewhere in these columns of the standing of the fraternities and sororities in scolarships for the last semester. It doubtless has occurred to many that the situation is rather unusual. We do not know why the precedent started last year in connection with the scholarship cup was broken this year, but it manifestly has been. A constitution was drawn up in which the details of the contest were carefully regulated, and the whole was given full publicity in The Campus and by announcement at chapel. The conferring of the cup was attended with a certain degree of ceremony, and the standing of the fraternities was suppressed until that time.

All precedent has been cast aside, and those who rightfully won the cup on both sides of the college neglected. No official announcement of the rseults of the contest was made. Without any warning a full statement appeared in the Rutland Herald several weeks ago, and it was by this means alone that the students learned of the outcome. The rules require the publication of the results in the college paper , but our reporter was forced to solicit them after learning that they had been sent to an outside publisher. It is our opinion that we are voicing the sentiment of the student body in registering a protest against such treatment both of the college paper and the student groups concerned.

Military Discipline

We trust that a word of criticism relative to the military spirit at Middlebury will not be taken amiss. The seriousness of the war and the part that many of us will be called upon to play in it has not thoroughly penetrated our skulls. A year's time has resigned us to the state of war, and the feeling that "yet a little longer I will abide" has perniciously fastened itself upon us.

The evidence of this attitude is best illustrated in the spirit manifested in our battalion. A very slight conception of military discipline and conduct seems to be largely prevalent. "I did not come to a military school" voiced only too well the feelings of a goodly number drilling regularly. There seems to be a hitch in the willingness of many to bind themselves to state duty, as though they were not soon to be called for a far more serious task of trench warfare in France or Flanders. The efficiency of a military unit depends first of all on its morale, but we have little to boast of in this line. The respect due a military officer is not shown the commissioned men in our battalion.

The largest share of the responsibility falls on the officers themselves, as they must command the respect and obedience of their men. Especially is this true in a time of war when we are supposed to be preparing for real business. We feel that they have failed in this regard. Why should we not be as military as any other officially organized body of men? The men themselves want stern discipline, in the last analysis, and it is lack of this that breeds the spirit of indifference that has crept into our organization.

"One More for Middlebury"

Just at this time of year, high school students are thinking of what they will do after graduation. Many have the future clearly in mind, many more are undecided. We students of Middlebury College can show our loyalty in the truest way by getting some of our home friends to come here. We can't afford to take a half hearted interest in this matter—to say "It would be great if some of the home crowd came up here next year", and let the matter rest there. There's no time like the present! Let's tell our friends about Middlebury, not as if we were agents for shoe-polish but in so earnest and enthusiastic a manner that they won't feel satisfied until they come here. Begin today, and let our slogan be "One more for Middlebury."

"Premature Peace Talk"

In a note received by the War Service Committee Monday morning from Jesse C. French '05 the admonition appears, "Oppose premature peace talk.' So far as we know, French is the only Midd man who has been over the top. The result of his exprience should carry a good deal of weight with us, since many bright hopes of an early victory for the Allies has been dashed to the ground by unforseen calamities, e. g., Russian anarchy and disaffection. We are taking the thing too easily here at Midd as is shown by many of the men in the battalion who have so far evidenced little seriousness of purpose in their military training. What a man does counts a great deal more than the attitude he expresses in words. Our chance at the front line trenches will come yet. Are we preparing seriously for this work?

Letter From Lieutenant Jones

The following is an extract from a letter recently received from Charles S. Jones '15 who is ready to enter active service at the front as a Military Aviator.

Wednesday night when I was refereeing the basketball game they informed me that I was to go to Paris and bring back some planes with several others. Of course, I felt pleased, and we left camp at 5 a. m. Thursday in a Ford for Paris. We had a bum driver, and he lost his way and in trying to turn around, he ran into a ditch, and we all had to pile out in the mud and push it back into the road. Then just before arriving in town we turned out for a truck and went in again. We managed to miss our train, and got another in an hour and arrived in Paris at about 1 o'clock. We reported at headquarters, but it was too late to start back.

We stopped at the hotel Regina, one patronized a lot by Americans went over to the Place d'Invalides where they have the war trophies including cannon, parts of Zeps, and several German planes; also, the machine in which Guynemer brought down 19 Germans, and it was covered with flowers. I also visited Napoleon's tomb and famous galleries where they have trophies since the beginning of French history. After dinner I went to see Gaby Deslys and her musical show, which was very good, with a lot of American songs and a "Jazz" band which sounded very good.

Friday it was too cloudy and rainy to fly, so I went to the Bastile, the Eiffel Tower, Madeline, and the Louvre, which is closed. I saw the Arc de Triomphe, and just the other side of the Champs Elysees a couple of buildings which were almost demolished by the raid the other night. I was delighted with Paris, its beautiful streets, its parks, statues, and beautiful buildings. I did a lot of shopping, including a uniform, boots, cap, etc. I was going to cable you, but I was afraid it would worry you a lot to get a cable for no special reason, so I did not. In the evening I was going to eat with the crowd, but I missed them and ran into a medical lieutenant who knew Paris, so I went to supper with him and a girl friend of his. We had a nice meal, and then went to a play, "La Fantastique", which was good, but my French was not fast enough to follow the jokes and my friend had to interpret them for me.

Saturday was a beautiful day and we went out to the field, leaving there about noon we stopped at E—— for dinner. I started out after the rest, for I had a bad magneto and had hard work getting the engine started, and I did not have a map of the country. They gave me the direction, but it was pure luck that I found him at E——. I had a wonderful view of Paris, for while it is forbidden to fly over the city, I went along the bank of the Seine for a ways, so got a good look at it as it was clear. The journey was uneventful, but the country is beautiful with so many chateaux, villages, and woods. It took us about two hours, for there was a mean cross-wind, and at that it isn't bad for 150 miles.

This morning I was up 1200 feet, and the clouds came in under me and it was just like a very rough sea beneath with a clear sky and the sun above. When I got back to land it was raining a little, and I was lost for a time, but got back all right. You asked me about my instructions and the number we have here but I cannot tell that. Mail is coming through O. K. now, and I think it should keep up. I guess this covers the trip pretty well, but it was a great experience, and I would not have missed it for anything.

1st Lieutenant. Charles S. Jones,
A. S. S. C. U. S. R.

KRAZY KORNER

On February 28, 1918, a group of students from both the men's and women's college met in the old chapel and formed an organization which has been needed in Middlebury for quite some time—an organization for the settling of the various disputes which arise from time to time among the students and between the students and the faculty.

The first topic of discussion was one which has caused widespread interest throughout the college for the past two or three years, viz., Should monopoly of the little social hall at Pearsons be prohibited? Belden'19 complained that Kasper '20 has almost completely monopolized this quiet little spot during the entire year. He claims to be at a great disadvantage due to the fact that "Joe" sits in his window until he sees "Don" crossing the field near the athletic field, whereupon he sets out for Pearsons, arriving about 5 minutes ahead. It was agreed that this was a case of unequal competition and the matter was referred to the President of Student Government for solution.

Gorham '18 and Parker '20, who had been taking an active part in the Belden-Kasper case, now came forth with their grievances. They complained that they have not had a parlor at Bat Cot this year in spite of the fact that they have arrived as early as 7:30. Both claimed that it was rather discouraging to look forward to an evening spent on the stairs or on the hall-rack; and requested that something be done to give them a chance. It was decided that, in view of the fact they usually arrived at about 7:45 they were entitled to no recourse and it was decided to continue the policy of running these parlors on the basis of free competition.

The meeting was then opened for general discussion and some rather pertinent questions were raised. Several wanted to know why Major McFarland should "bawl out" the men for appearing at drill without their uniforms when he was so frequent an offender. It was unanimously agreed that the college should either abolish the custom of giving half cuts for tardiness or should install a system of bells which would ring in all buildings at the same time each day and not vary by as much as 5 minutes as they do at present. The practice of singing after chapel was highly commended and it was suggested that singing on the campus be encouraged in order to keep up the spirit aroused at the daily "sings". The enthusiasm of the meeting was drowned by the remark that mid-semester grades were to be in by Wednesday. The meeting adjourned at 9:35 after a motion had been passed that another meeting be held March 7 in Pearsons social hall.

Prize Speaking

The preliminary contests, which decided who were to speak for the Merrill and Parker Prizes on April 19, were striking proofs of the efficiency of the new system of selection adopted this year. According to the plan, anyone who wished could try out at a set date and from these the students whom the judges considered as the best speakers were the ones who would speak at the prize contest, irrespective of fraternities. On Tuesday, March 5 and Thursday, March 7, respectively, fifteen sophomores and twelve freshmen assembled in the old chapel and delivered their speeches in a way which may be better imagined when we remember that this year it was not the best of their individual fraternity delegations that spoke but the best of their classes. The superior ability of the average contestant this year over the average speaker last year was realized most by the judges who found it much more difficult to select the best men this time than has been the case in former years.

The sophomores who contested were: Burckes, Canfield, Ginsburg, Cooley, Cohen, Haugh, Houghton, Huggard, Kasper, Kinne, McFee, McSweeney, Miesse, Sincerbox, Thomas, Walbridge. Of these the following were chosen: Huggard, Sincerbox, Thomas, Walbridge. The judges were Professors White, Bonney and Lawrence.

The freshmen who contested for places in the Parker .contest were Bigelow, Carlson, Cohen, Homans, Jewett, Keppler, Mercer, C. Moody, Pierce, Richardson, Swan, Whitmore. The men chosen were: Bigelow, Jewett, Keppler, Pierce. The judges were: Professors Harrington, Abbott and Hamlin.

An Afternoon in the Campus Office

Violent hostilities broke out in the office of The Middlebury Campus at 2:24 (p. m.), Saturday afternoon, last week, March 9, when, as a result of an altercation between the editor-in-chief and an associate editor, the latter crowned the august head of the Board with the waste-paper basket and all the contents and appurtenances thereof. The outraged editor at once instituted a series of reprisals which rapidly assumed warlike proportions. The neutrality of the assembled Board was seriously menaced at times by the lawless acts of the belligerents who disregarded all the known laws of land and naval warfare. At length the editor succeeded in carrying the associate bodily out of the building. The latter attempted to climb back into the office through the open window but his doughty chief grabbed him by the left posterior locomotor appendage and yanked him to the ground.

Meanwhile the other members of the Board, agreeing upon the necessity of using all possible measures of constraint, short of warfare, declared a blockade upon both belligerents, and locked the door of the office, leaving the offenders on the outside incoherent with passionate remonstrance. The editor, however, soon refused to recognize the blockade and forced an entrance into the barred zone. He accused the assistant editor-in-chief of instituting the conspiracy, and another struggle ensued in which the editor was again victor. Having thus demonstrated his supremacy through the rude arbitrament of war, he ceased all belligerent operations and announced that he was ready to receive contributions from his subordinates. The first of these appeared immediately in the form of a fair-sized handful of snow which was received squarely on the proboscis. Through his "cool-headedness" and magnanimity a treaty of peace was signed by which the sovereignty and suzerainty of the editor were recognized by the High Contracting Parties, and the Campus office, and all the furniture, goods, and chattels, thereunto pertaining, were ceded in perpetuity to the editor-in-chief, his heirs and assigns forever.

A Young Blizzard

The many indications of spring which erstwhile cheered the heart of many a student were somewhat deceiving. Last Sunday furnished a taste of real winter seldom seen in the lengthening March days. A regular blizzard for this region induced many a pious devotee of one or another of the local churches to content himself by the "hearth" ensconced in an easy chair and perusing his favorite book or the Sunday paper; occasionally the Bible might have been substituted for the above mentioned literature. The drifting snow which was accumulating very rapidly seemed to thoroughly enjoy its utter helplessness in the furious rage of old Boreas.

The chapel service in the afternoon called forth a few rare spirits who traveled the elements by force of habit or fear of a dock in their check for services rendered in the choir. It was to a "measley multitude" that the chants were sung and the sermon preached. Pedal navigation was indeed difficult; but in spite of the extreme roughness of the weather a few were known to have taken a "constitutional" around the town apparently oblivious to the difficulties they were supposed to be undergoing; while one or two brushed away the dust of last year and actually read the entire Ninth Ode of Horace.

The Case Against Germany

The first of the series of talks on "Christianity and the War" was given by Dr.Harrington at the Y. M. C. A. meeting last Wednesday night. He spoke first of the German philosophy and the state of mind which led the German people to begin the war. He next touched upon the methods which the Germans employed in carrying on the war; their atrocities in Belgium and Poland, and their general "blood and iron" policy of terrorism. He concluded with the opinion that there could be no permanent peace until this "brigand among the nations" was overwhelmingly defeated.

At the meeting next Wednesday, March 13, Professor Abbott will speak on "Political and Economic Aspects of the War."

Seniors and Freshmen Win

The juniors tried in vain to keep the freshmen from following up their first victory with another, for the freshmen carried off the game by a score of 8-2.

The feature of the evening was the cheering which rose from both sides of the gymnasium, for the men seized the opportunity to practice for the varsity game. When their songs gave out, there followed a sparring match between the classes, and the valiant efforts for the last word were worthy of a greater game.

The line-ups were:

COLLEGE NOTES

Prof. Frank W. Cady preached in Salisbury Sunday, March 10.

Miss Anna Chynoweth was the guest of her sister over the week-end.

Miss Margaret Fuller of Rutland was the guest of her sister, Alice Fuller '18 over Sunday.

Mrs. Clark of Vergennes, spent Sunday at Battell Cottage with her daughter, Helen Clark '20.

Christine Ritchie '21 is ill at her home in North Adams, Mass. The time of her return to college is uncertain.

Miss Ada Chapman of Bishop Hopkins Hall, Burlington, is visiting her brother, Henry Chapman '18.

Louise Reynolds is representing the Middlebury Student Government Association at an Intercollegiate Conference on Vocational Opportunities for Women, held at Wheaton College.

At the Civics Club meeting last week Miss McNeil finished reading "Private Peat" and began a new book, "Carry On" by Coningsby Dawson, which promises to be as entertaining as the former. All the while the knitting needles clicked.

Owing to the recent absence of Leon Adkins '19 from college the junior committee which was appointed to make investigations concerning the advisability of giving a Prom, has been unable to meet. Adkins is chairman of the committee.

A meeting of the Apollo Club was held in the Latin room Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock. President Buffum introduced the speaker, Dean Wright, who spoke to the members of the club on the patron deity, Apollo. As he wished to tell of one of the Apollo myths, he read Stephen Phillips' charming poem "Marpessa". Those who were at the meeting have Dean Wright to thank for a most enjoyable evening.

There was a very interesting display of spring styles at Battell Cottage Friday evening when the girls of the Home Economics 6 class appeared in the dresses they had just made. Each girl was called on to "stand up and turn around," slowly, so that the audience might get the full benefit. The dresses which were very attractive, aroused much favorable comment, and Home Ec. 6 bids fair to become a most popular course.

ALUMNI NOTES

'11. A letter from "Cherub" Palmer dated February 18 and bearing an Italian postmark states that "Spiedle" Barnes '11 and Ben Fisher '14 are at the same aviation camp with him. Fisher was then in the hospital with rheumatism but progressing satisfactorily.

'15. Adelaide Ross visited friends on the hill over the week-end.
